Florence Henderson starred in the TV show The Brady Bunch, which began in 1969. People would probably never have heard of Henderson if she <sup>1</sup>  (not play) an unusual part in the show – as Carol Brady, the caring mother of three biological daughters and three stepsons. Henderson fitted the role perfectly. The producers knew that the show wouldn't succeed <sup>2</sup> if / as soon as / unless viewers <sup>3</sup>  (fall) in love with the main characters, Carol and her second husband, Mike. If the show had been about an ordinary family, it <sup>4</sup>  (might / not work). However, at the time, more and more people were living in blended families, and the show gave them hope. They thought, "If it <sup>5</sup>  (be) possible for the Bradys to live happily together, we can, too." The messages to the viewers were simple: Problems <sup>6</sup>  (not go) away <sup>7</sup> when / unless / if you talk about them. <sup>8</sup> As soon as / When / After you treat each other with respect, you <sup>9</sup>  (get along). And if parents <sup>10</sup>  (spend) more time with their children, they would be happier. Henderson died in 2016, but she will always be remembered as one of TV's most popular mums.
